Massachusetts Men Oppose Government Paper Money.

REFORM IN THE CURRENCY SYSTEM

Memorable Meeting of Bragg and Buckner.

ANTI - CONVENTION GOSSIP

The Massachusetts delegation to the gold democratic convention held a meeting at Indianapolis yesterday, at which considerable eathuslasm was manifested. There was some talk about candidates, but no conclusion was reached, and a committee of five was authorized, with Chairman Sironney Butler at its head, to canvass the situation with other state delegations and determine the best course to pursue. It was decided that in case there was a probability of more than one ballot a complementary vote should be east for Secretary Olney. In case there seemed to be a probability that the convention would agree upon a candidate on the first ballot the Massachusetts delegation would not cast a complimentary vote, but vote for the caudidate the gold democrats intend to sup-

Henry E. Lamb, a member of the committee on resolutions, was instructed to ask for the incorporation of a plank in the platform indorsing international arbitration.

A currency plank, offered by Charles A. A currency plank, offered by Charles A. Conant, was adopted, and Mr. Lamb authorized to present it to the committee. This plank is one which has received the indorsement of the Treasury Department, and contains suggestions by Secretary Carlisle, and is largely on the line which he has advanted before the figure commithas advocated before the finance committees in Congress. It is as follows:
"We recognize the fact that the existing currency system of the United States, created in a period of national stress, is not based upon sound and scientific principles, and requires serious revision to adapt it to the needs of commerce and production. "The tendency of the system of govern-ment paper money and national bank notes based upon bonded security has been to restrict c.reulation where it was needed; to accumulate idle capital in a few centers; to subject the rate of interest to unjust fluctuations and radical inequalities in dif-ferent sections; to restrict enterprise and cripple industry; to make currency in times of business activity and redund-antly plentiful in times and places where it was not needed, and at such times to expel the surplus in the form of gold, the money of international exchange. The gold standard has not been the cause, but the victim of these conditions. The banks also victim of these conditions. The banks also have been the victims of laws not of their making, the result of war necessities, and have incurred unmerited hostility because they have been prevented by these laws from rendering the services to agriculture, industry and commerce which should be the legitimate and natural function under a proper currency system.

"We believe that the protection of the Table credit against the results of agita-tion for the debasement of the metallic standard has been rendered doubly difficult by the defective character of our paper currency. The gold standard has borne the colum of events for which it is not recolum of events for which it is not re-sponsible, and which should be directed against the vicious policy of government paper carrency, subject to perpetual reis-sise. The side of bonds for gold on four occasions during the past three years has been due to the fact that the existing curten y system has thrown upon the treasury an edigation which should be imposed law upon the banks. This system of egal tender paper brought discredit and suffering to every people who have resorted democratic movement. He is said to be the currency upon a sound and scientific basis.

"We demand, therefore, that the initial steps be taken for the withdrawal from circulation of the legal tender notes, or for a change of the existing system of redemption and reisere.

we lemand, in order that there may be no improper contraction of the currency, and that it may be capable of ready adjustment to the demands of business, that the present banking laws be so needs, that the present banking laws be so modified as to interpose no obstacle to the creation of an elastic banking currency, subject to such control as shall insure uniformity, security and redemption in standard coin on demard."

Bragg and Buckner Meet.

There was a pleasant incident in one of the pariors of the Dennison House last night. It was the meeting of Gen, Bragg of Wisconson and Gen. Simon Bolivar Buckner, whose names are being coupled everywhere as the probable nominees of the convention. The two grizzled old veterans, one of whom wore the blue, while the other wore the gray, and both of whom saw distinguished service in their respec-tive armies, bad never met before. Gen. Buckner arrived in the afternoon, and some of Gen. Bragg's friends took him up to the latter's headquarters. Quite a crow had collected to witness the meeting. The two men clasped hands cordially when presented. Gen. Buckner remarked, pleasant-ly, that there might have been a time when he would not have been anxious to meet Gen. Bragg at such close quarters.
The latter's eyes twinkled as he replied. facetiously, that he was thankful the days of their hostility had departed forever.

But now," he added, "in a crisis almost as grave as that of thirty years ago, I am glad we can march shoulder to shoulder in the battle for the preservation of the na-tion's honor from the silver heresies." The crowd applauded, and followed their applause with a cheer when an enthusias-tic Texas delegate mounted a chair and shouted: "The kind of silver we want is that which shines on the heads of those Gen. Bragg and Gen. Buckner retired, arm-in-arm, to a room and had an hour's

A general canvass of the delegates last night on the question of including a declaration in favor of bimetallism by international agreement in the platform showed an apparently large sentiment against any allusion to an international agreement. There were a few delegates who favored such a declaration, but they appeared to be in a very decided minority. The ma-jority favored the declaration for the mainenance of the gold standard, but many desired to be included in it a declaration for the largest use of silver consistent with the maintenance of the parity with gold.

Permanent Organization Desired. At a caucus of the Oregon delegation last night the following resolution was prepared for presentation to the convention today:

"Resolved, That it is the sense of this convention that permanent organization of the party in convention now assembled is advisable and necessary; that a national committee be selected for the usages of the democratic party, whose duty it shall be to call future conventions of the party, apportion delegates thereto, provide for the time and place of the holding thereof and generally to perform such duties as de-volve upon the committee of a political Tennessee, and publisher of the Chattanooga Times, arrived yesterday with the Tennessee delegation. He at once began he has found a great deal of sentiment for Mr. Morton in lowa and adjoining states. "Secretary Morton." said Mr. Ochs, "has een closely identified with President Cleveland's administration. He was one of the arst members of the cabinet to come out squarely in favor of the gold standard. He lives at Lincoln, Neb., the nome of Bryan, and this would carry a great deal of weight in that city and state. In the past contests between Morton and Bryan, Morton has always downed Bryan and been successful. He is a fluent writer, a good speaker and has been identified with the farmers. He is sound to the core on all public questions and has always been unflinching in support of democratic doctrines. With Morton for President and a southern man for Vice President, the gold democrats would make

A Boom for Lawler.

The Minnesota delegation held a meeting last night, and the candidacy of Daniel W Lawler for Vice President was informally discussed. The delegation was willing to support him for the place, but it was thought that the peculiar situation of the candidates made it very likely that in case Watterson was not nominated for President, that nomination would go to a state so near Minnesota that it would be impossible to secure the vice presidential nomimation for a man from that state.

Mr. Lawler's enthusiastic admirers determined that it was as easy to secure the nomination for first place as that of second, and it is possible that his name will be presented for the first place. New Mexico Wants Statehood.

The territory of New Mexico delegation, headed by William J. Schofield, chairman, is on hand in full force, and will occupy, they say, every seat they are entitled to on the floor of the convention. They are in favor of a platform which will embrace a plank recommending the admission of ter-ritories to statehood. They believe that a plank of that kind will add strength to their ticket. With the delegation is W. S. Harris of Kingston, N. M., a republican, the has been discarded by every civi-but strongly in sympathy with the national democratic movement. He is said to be the

EDITORS CALL ON MCKINLEY. An Enthusiastic Party Goes to Canton

From West Virginia. The mountaineer editors of West Virginia have good healthy lungs. When the party of eighty-six called on Maj. McKinley at Canton, Ohio, yesterday afternoon several hundred persons joined in the gathering. Everybody was enthusiastic, and the delegation applauded nearly every sentence Maj. McKinley spoke. The presentation of the Republican Press Association by Mr. P. W. Morris was unusually witty and entertaining.

Maj. McKinley was greeted with the greatest enthusiasm. He said: "Mr. Morris and gentlemen of the Republican Press Association of West Virginia: It affords me sincere pleasure to give you welcome to my state, my city and my nome. From no quarter could visitors be more welcome nor from any body of men than the renresentatives of the republican press of West Virginia, from a state in which I am intensely interested as a citizen and a re-publican, and because I believe that upon the success of republican principles her advancement and welfare largely depend.

"The cause in which you are engaged this year is one commanding both conscience and interest. The republican cause never was more just and righteous than it is this year, and the triumph of its principles was year, and the triumph of its principles in never more essential to the general wel-fare of the American people than now. We fare of the American people than now. We have had great political contests in the past, but I doubt if any was ever waged which involved higher interests to the people and the country at large than those presented in this campaign. (Applause and "Nothing is more vital to the standing and progress of a country than the preservation of its credit and financial honor. (Applause and cries of 'That's right, too.') Nothing is more indispensable to business and prosperity than that the currency of the country shall be so honest that it can cheat nobody. (Great cheering.)

"Nothing is of greater moment to the welfare of the country than the adoption of a policy which will give to labor and capital constant employment with fair retal constant employment with fair re-turns. (Applause and cries of 'Good.') But, gentleman, lying beneath all these, and more important than all these, is the preservation of law and order-the reign of do-ervation of law and order—the reign of do-mestic quiet. (Cheers.)

"All these are embraced in the contention which is upon us this year. In connection with these questions, as editors and pub-lishers, you have the gravest responsibili-ties. You help to make public sentiment, and a right public sentiment is what is most needed at this juncture of our na-ticnal affairs. Never was the press of the tional affairs. Never was the press of the country more aroused to these issues than now. Never did the republican cause may such mighty support from the newspapers such mighty support from the newspapers such mighty support from the newspapers of the United States as it has today. This help is not confined to the republican press alone, but includes many of the greatest newspapers which have hitherto advocated the democratic course.

newspapers which have intherto advocated the democratic cause. (Great applause.) "All this is an evidence that the people appreciate that a great crisis is upon them. d that the way to avoid that crisis is for patriotic men of every section of the country to units and act together in the comnon cause of country. (Great applause.) "It is the selfish concern, therefore, that prompts me to express the hope that West Virginia may become permanently a repub-lican state. (Cheers and cries of 'It will go republican this fall, all right.')

"And that what she gained so gloriously in 1894 will not be lost in 1896. (Great applause.) The republican party aims higher than that—it is not merely the success of individuals or party, but the good of the country it seeks; and it is in that spirit, animated only by patriotic sentiment, that animated only by patriotic sentiment, that I wish always to constantly speak and act. (Applause.) There is, in my judgment, no state whose prosperity is linked more closely to republican policies than West Virginia. You have extensive river commerce, both on the Ohio and the Kanawha; and this is never so prosperous and active as when your great steel and iron interests, your mines, your mills, your factories are busily employed. (Cries of That's right.')

Your interests as a people no longer run on sectional lines. (Cheers.) "Thank God, the last lingering estrangements between the north and south are being forever effaced (great applause), and the appeal for the restoration of the American system for protection and the continuarce of a sound system of finance is infinitely more important to West Virginia than any other political questions that could engage their attention. And it is no reflection either upon our honor or independence that we refuse to adopt the financial policy of China and Mexico. Let us have neither free trade nor free silver. (Cries of 'We won't.') BRYAN SPEAKS AT COLUMBUS.

The Democratic Nominee at Ohio's Capital. There was another demonstration paid the Bryan party when they left Cleveland. Ohio, yesterday for Columbus. About the hotel and depot large crowds had gathered in order to catch a parting glance of the nomines. The Columbus reception committee took charge of the party. A special car had been provided, and it was decorated inside and out with bunting, while on each side of the car was a great banner bearing the inscription, "W. J. Bryan, Our Next President."

About two hundred laborers employed in the shops about the depot came over to grasp the hand of the nominee and assure him of their support. As Mr. Bryan stood on the rear platform of the train the crowd cheered him time and time again. One of them called out, "They can drive a horse to water, but they can't make him drink," and the others cheered and indorsed the statement.

Detective C. H. Kettles of Cleveland was In charge of the train and acted as Mr. Bryan's body guard. At every village through which the train passed hundreds through which the train passed manners were gathered at the depot in order to catch a glance of the nominee as he passed through. There were but three stops made, and at these places Mr. Bryan shook hands with those assembled. He spoke hands with those assembled. He spoke a few words to the crowd at Grafton, Crestline, Shelby and Delaware, and at Crestline, Shelby and Delaware, and at each of these places was cheered and applauded.

He arrived in Columbus nearly an hour The first stop after the train left Cleve-land was at the little town of Shelby junclard was at the little town of Shelby junction. Here 700 laboring men had gathered to see the nominee, and a hearty cheer went up as the train pulled in. There were loud cries for a speech from Mr. Bryan, but he excused himself on the plea that he was too hoarse and that he wanted to save his voice for the Columbus meeting. This would not cetting the This would not satisfy the ing. This would not satisfy the crowd, however, and they still demanded that the candidate should talk. Mr. Bryan replied that if he had time he would like to give them a silver speech, but owing to the fact that he was unable to do so he would furnish a substitute..

"I will appoint each one of you a substitute to make a silver speech on election day when you go to vote," he said. "You might forget what I would say today, but you will not forget what you will say when you come to make your speech."

Then the crowd howled, and Mr. and Mrs. Bryan shook hands with those near them. Four young men in the outskirts them. Four young men in the outskirt of the gathering attempted to start a Mc Kirley yell, but the admirers of the democratic nominee would not have it and drowned the efforts of the McKinleyites with a hearty cheer for Bryan.

Spoke in the Capitol Grounds. Mr. Bryan had the capitol grounds at Columbus for his forum, and the memory of local politicians contains no such demonstrations. Inhabitants say that no other attraction has ever drawn so strongly in Columbus except a display of fireworks in connection with the state fair on the same grounds two years ago, when 50 per cent more people were gathered.

A roofed and flag-draped platform faced the eastern front of the capitol building, and as Mr. Bryan looked down from its height, twenty feet above the plain of faces, he saw the steps and terraces packed in solid rows, with the gloomy stone wall for the background, while about the other for the background, while about the other three sides of the stage across the lawn of several acres to the street beyond stood regiments, of which an accurate estimate was an impossibility and which a careful guess would place at 30,000.

Looking down from the roof of the capitol building an hour before the candidate's arrival one saw the whole place.

several years, and after the candidate's speech the democratic nominee for Congress in the Columbus district, John J. Lentz, addressed the remainder of the

Mr. Bryan said. "This is the largest audience to which I ever tried to speak. I have had occasion to talk where the audience filled the house, but I never had the occasion to talk where the audience filled all out of doors. If you all vote as you now sheut I don't see how there can be any question about the triumph of free silver in the state of Ohio. We have entered upon a campaign which means much to the American people. If your opponents speak truly when they describe what will in their judgment be the effect of free coinage, then the success of the Chicago ticket would certainly be a calamity to the country. If, on the other hand, we speak the truth when we describe to you the effects of a gold standard continued, then the maintenance of the gold standard until foreign nations come to our relief is an evil which cannot be con-templated by those who love their country. We have begun an unceasing warfare against the gold standard. The republican party without declaring the gold standard is a good thing has declared that the gold standard must be maintained. I call your attention to the fact that no party in the history of this country has ever in a na-tional convention commended the gold standard Its effects are so bad that no party has dared to uphold it."

An Interrupted Speech. Here Mr. Bryan went from the front of the platform to the side, first excusing himself to the audience in front as follows: "Excuse me for one moment and perhaps by making them hear me on the other side I will be able to bring order out of confusion. If you people here will be as still as you are now for a little while, I will come back to you."

Mr. Bryan then spoke from the side of the platform, saying:
"I desire to impress upon your minds the fact that the enemy we are fighting in this campaign is an enemy which has never gone into an open battle. The advocates of gone into an open battle. The advocates of the gold standard have never dared to submit the gold standard to the arbitra-ment of a ballot. Every step that has been taken has been taken by stealth and with-out the approval of the American people. When sliver was demonetized in 1873 the records had not discussed it and present people had not discussed it, and persons who were members of Congress and voted on the measure testified that they did not understand that the bill demonetized silver.

"When the crime was discovered and the "When the crime was discovered and the American people attempted to restore silver to its ancient place by the side of gold the opponents of free coinage forced the Bland act upon Congress as a compromise, and as soon as the Bland act went into force the enemies of free silver proceeded to repeal the Bland act and left nothing in its place. But the silver sentiment grew until 1800, and in that year the opponents of free coinage, being afraid of the passing of a free coinage bill, secured another com-promise, which was known as the Sherman law.

"In support of that measure Senator Sherman made a speech, and in that speech he said that we required more than $42,-000,000 new money every year to keep pace (Great cheering.) And with population and industry, and he advocated that measure on the ground that it gave to the people more money, and yet in his Recollections, published only a few months ago, you will find that Senator Sherman there says that he was in favor of the Sherman law simply to prevent free colnage, and that he was for its repeal the day after it was enacted if he could prevent the substitution of free coinage.

"There you will find the chief supporter of gold standard policy in the United States supporting a bill because it gave money to, the American people and then declaring that he would have voted for the repeal of it the very next day."

MOVING A BIG BUILDING.

Glassware and Crockery Were Not Removed From the Second-Story. What is believed to be the largest thing ever moved on wheels was started by the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Company at Locust Point, in Baltimore, yesterday. The enterprise consists in moving one of the company's warehouses, which is 440 feet long, 120 feet wide and two stories high, a distance of 120 feet. More than a month ago a force of nearly one hundred men began the work of placing 1,000 rollers under the building, and so nicely have the plans been worked out and so much confidence have those in charge that no mishap will occur, that one hundred tons of glassware and crockery that are in the second story have been allowed to remain there.
